French Good Fighters

"When the U. S. troops took over parts of the Chateau-Thierry salient, the French at the very point said, 'practically given it up as lost,'" said the general. "At that time everything of the nature of great value in France was being moved further south. The French fought to a finish. They had plenty of men and they could not afford to stand losses when we got to Europe. On one occasion I heard of a battalion of our men being thrown in to protect the flank of one of our divisions. We succeeded all right, the French moved forward with little loss, occupied the position, and the Paris papers gave them great credit. They did not take into consideration that the reported losses of that battalion were nearly 30 percent."

The audience enjoyed a violin duet by Mrs. Ralph Henderson and Miss Florence Grayson, with Miss Mary Henderson at the piano. A solo was sung by Mrs. J. A. Kasper with Mrs. W. R. Brown as accompanist. Mrs. Kasper responded to an encore. Mrs. J. W. Lonsdale presided and introduced Mrs. Howard as "Gen. Pershing's right hand man."
